CELEBRATING

DIVERSITY & INCLUSION IN STEM

For the 2023-2024 school year, First Book is celebrating the wide world of STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering, and Math). This calendar celebrates STEM subjects and careers and the diverse scientists, engineers, and mathematicians whose contributions have changed our world for the better. Throughout the calendar, you will find month-long observances, religious observances, and dates with cultural, historical, or inclusive significance generally and in STEM fields specifically. Use this calendar to celebrate STEM and teach students about people from diverse communities whose contributions are not always celebrated but whose innovations, inventions, and ingenuity had a profound impact on our society.

The U.S. population is becoming more and more diverse, and the need to embrace the many cultures in our classrooms is more important than ever. When a student's learning environment respects their history, values, beliefs, and traditions, students and their families are better positioned to thrive. Being culturally competent—having the ability to successfully teach students who come from cultures other than one's own—is critical to the success of our increasingly diverse student population and society. Be sure to visit www.fbmarketplace.org/free-resources for more materials to help you celebrate culture, diversity & inclusion all year long with your students!

AUGUST

Dr. Shirley Anne Jackson is an inventor and theoretical physicist. She was the first Black woman to receive a Ph.D. from MIT and holds more than 50 honorary degrees. Her research led to inventions such as the touch-tone phone, caller ID, and call waiting. Trailblazers like Dr. Jackson are important because students of all backgrounds and identities should see themselves represented in STEM careers. The beginning of the school year is the ideal time to make sure your curriculum and classroom library include diverse and inclusive representation.

TRY THIS!

- Explore the Diversity & Inclusion¹ section of the Marketplace for books that reflect our diverse society.
- Share the inspiring stories of young people with a passion for STEM featured in the Inspiring Young Changemakers video series.²
- Have students research someone from an underrepresented community whose work in STEM made a positive impact. To help them with their search, ask: What products make your life easier? What diseases were around when your grandparents were young that now have a vaccine or cure?

SEPTEMBER

Welcoming Week (September 8 – 17) is an opportunity to ensure all students feel valued in your classroom and school community. The beginning of the year is the ideal time to collaboratively create classroom contracts and establish rules and routines needed for a safe and inclusive learning environment.

TRY THIS!

- ✦ Visit First Book's Creating Welcoming Schools & Communities¹ section to build or refresh your classroom library with vibrant titles that reflect and explore many cultures.
- ✦ Back to school can be challenging for recent immigrants and refugees. Visit the Immigrant & Refugee Experiences² section for books that highlight not only the real challenges faced by immigrants and refugees but also the joys, accomplishments, and everyday moments.
- ✦ Immigrants have always played a vital role in driving growth and progress in the U.S., including in STEM. Since 2000, 40 percent of Nobel Prizes won by Americans in chemistry, medicine, and physics were earned by immigrants. Have students research one of these Nobel prize recipients and share what they learn with the class.

§Labor Day is an annual tribute to the contributions of all workers toward the strength and prosperity of the U.S.

OCTOBER

October 10th is World Mental Health Day. Remind students that psychologists and psychiatrists are STEM professionals who make a positive difference in people’s lives—such as Dr. Aggrey Washington Burke, a Jamaican-born psychiatrist whose work focused on the effects of race, class, and trauma on mental health in Black families.

TRY THIS!

- First Book’s Taking Care: An Educator Guide to Healthy Habits for Student Emotional Wellness¹ offers healthy habits to support wellness and reduce stress and anxiety. Learn about types of stress (p. 7), how to practice mindfulness (p. 9), and educator self-care (pp. 13-15).
- Visit First Book’s Social & Emotional Learning² page to find great resources focused on promoting mental health.
- Many athletes, like Simone Biles and Naomi Osaka, have shared their struggles with mental health. Have students choose an athlete or other public figure who has shared their mental health struggles. Discuss: How does it help everyone when famous people share their struggles? Why is it important to have mental health professionals of all backgrounds and identities?

NOVEMBER

On STEM/STEAM Day, educate students about the many STEM fields and careers and encourage their interest in science, technology, engineering, art, and math.

TRY THIS!

- Use the “STEM Defines Our Future” videos and educator guide¹ to inspire students to pursue STEM subjects and careers. This series explains how soft skills like communication and teamwork are critical in STEM careers.
- Find engaging titles about science, technology, engineering, and the arts in the STEAM² section of the Marketplace.
- Two famous inventors, Dr. Patricia Bath and Hedy Lamarr, were born in November. Dr. Bath received a patent for a laser used to remove cataracts, improving the vision of millions of people. Lamarr, also an actress, worked on technology that led to GPS, Bluetooth, and WiFi. After sharing these stories, give students a writing prompt: What would they invent to change society for the better? Who would benefit? How would it change lives?
